THE GH CIGARS STORY

It takes generations to make a great cigar, and on its fourth generation, GH continues its tradition close to its humble beginnings.

Tobacco farmers and cigar makers, Guillermo and George Rico, believe in patience. Building their business slowly and steadily through careful exposure of their cigars to the marketplace, GH Cigars' hallmark is attention to detail and a high reliance on strict quality control in traditional tabaquero fashion.

The Rico family history in tobacco stretches back to 1920 when Guillermo's grandfather began growing dark tobacco in Colombia, and his father then continued the tradition. Guillermo recalls following him around the fields as a child and his mother rolling cigars at home. In 1998 Guillermo established his factory in Danlí, Honduras, later becoming the birthplace of GH premium cigars and the quintessential GH look. That legacy continues today in GH Cigars with a strong sense of family tradition embedded into every cigar made.

In 2003 the staple GH family of handmade cigars were introduced to resounding success by the father and son team. These long-filler cigars became the core of the company brand with three distinct blends: the Connecticut No. 1, a mild but rich cigar with a Connecticut shade wrapper; the Criollo No. 3, a medium-bodied cigar in Criollo wrapper; and the Corojo No. 5, a peppery full-bodied cigar in a Corojo wrapper. Consistency has always been insisted with these expert blends, which continue to be GH Cigars' best selling cigars.

The legacy of making cigars at GH Cigars continues to be a family affair. Established in Miami, Guillermo and George Rico strive for quality in every leaf and cigar in production. Honesty and passion are what compel the father and son team to make great cigars, married with a sense of originality being the signature of their company. GH Cigars looks to the future with optimism and a great sense of appreciation for those who have come to know them and their brand.
